

First 5 California Book and Literacy Programs Survey Summary

February 14, 2020

Background

In February 2020, First 5 California (F5CA) conducted an online survey among 58 county commissions. This F5CA survey follows a previous survey conducted by First 5 Los Angeles and provides additional information about book and literacy programs such as number of books provided, costs, and partnerships. Among 58 First 5 county commissions, 56 responded to this survey, identifying a total of 83 book and/or literacy programs. Survey results for key data are presented as a statewide summary and a program-level summary for the most common or largest programs. Results presented should be read as preliminary and may contain some errors because of the quick time frame between survey launch, response by county commissions, and analysis by F5CA staff. Responses have not been validated via follow-up verification by F5CA staff.

Survey Highlights

- Almost all First 5 county commissions maintain and fund some kind of book or literacy program or partner with other local agencies in these efforts
- Some programs are explicitly designed around book gifting (e.g., Little by Little via WIC offices in Los Angeles, Dolly Parton Imagination Library via mail)
- However, many First 5s embed book gifting within other efforts (e.g., Kit for New Parents distribution, home visiting, library reading programs, preschool/family childcare, pediatric care, community events, family resource services)
- Book and literacy programs vary with regard to the evidence-basis for the program, ranging from evidence-based, evidence-informed, and locally developed programs that may not have been rigorously evaluated
- The number of books provided to children and families each year varied widely with an average of 18 per child per year
- The majority of programs cost less than $100 per child per year
- Common success identified include: Popularity of book gifting with parents and children, support by other local agencies, and interest in such programs by the business community. Some programs evaluated showed increased reading behaviors by parents and children together (e.g., Raising a Reader) or improved school readiness (Little by Little).
- Common challenges identified include: the cost of books, sustainability of funding, and difficulty in finding non-English children's books for purchase. One size does not fit all. Programs need to address the specific populations, resources available, and geography of each county.
